A Message from the FBI

FBI National Citizens Academy Alumni Association

FBI Headquarters has forwarded some new threat awareness materials from the National Counterintelligence and Security Center (NCSC). Please share these with your members and other community partners where appropriate.

SAFEGUARDING OUR FUTURE

NCSC recently launched a new "Safeguarding Our Future" campaign in which it will be issuing a series of one-page, unclassified bulletins -- each on a specific foreign intelligence threat -- to help raise awareness among private industry, academia, and state & local governments. Each is designed to provide a brief overview of a specific threat, as well as the impacts and mitigation steps. NCSC plans to issue these on a routine basis going forward. The following explain the first two iterations of this campaign:

The first "Safeguarding Our Future" bulletin, issued May 27, 2020, highlights the risks for state and local health organizations involved in procuring COVID tests from foreign suppliers. Many foreign suppliers of these tests are mandated to share information (including genetic data) they collect during COVID tests with their governments. The result is that genetic data could be compromised. Additional information on this particular bulletin can be found on NCSC's Twitter feed or LinkedIn page.

NCSC's second "Safeguarding Our Future" bulletin, issued June 10, 2020, highlights the continuing threat posed by nation-state cyber actors targeting US pharmaceutical, medical and biological research facilities to hijack COVID-related research. The bulletin describes the impact of such theft, along with steps for mitigation. Additional information on this particular bulletin can be found on NCSC's Twitter feed or LinkedIn page.

As NCSC issues additional information, they will post new bulletins on their webpage at www.ncsc.gov. For additional information on NCSC awareness materials or publications, follow @NCSCgov on Twitter, visit NCSC's LinkedIn page, or email NCSC at NCSC-Safeguarding-Our-Future@dni.gov.
